

tion, and in the evening laid himself down to rest, under a pleasant shade by the road side, which he afterwards understood to be no other than the bower of Satisfaction.

By crooked ways to raise to Fame
Is vain—False Honour's but a name.

By

H